ANNUAL REPORT

Presented By :

Ross-Chillicothe Convention
& Visitors Bureau

Introduction

The Ross-Chillicothe Convention & Visitors Bureau is a 501(c)(6) organization dedicated to promoting Chillicothe and Ross County, Ohio, as a prime tourism destination. Its operations are entirely funded by lodging tax revenue collected from overnight visitors staying in local hotels, cabins, and short-term rental properties. Ross County imposes a 3% lodging tax on these room nights, which is allocated to the Bureau for marketing and operational purposes. Similarly, the City of Chillicothe also collects a 3% lodging tax on properties that offer 5 rooms or more. The city contributes an annual investment to support the Bureau's initiatives.

Tourism in Ross County bolsters various industries that benefit directly from visitors, including lodging, food and beverage, and entertainment, among others. The broader community also reaps indirect benefits, as these sectors generate demand for suppliers and create job opportunities. Furthermore, residents enjoy an annual tax savings of $608 per household due to the economic impact of tourism.

EXECUTIVE OVERVIEW

MELODY YOUNG
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

During this past year, the Ross-Chillicothe Convention & Visitors Bureau strengthened its role as a key economic driver for Ross County by expanding its marketing reach to a broader and more diverse audiences. Strategic marketing initiatives increased awareness of the destination across regional and national markets, while enhanced outreach to group tour organizers helped position Ross County as a compelling option for organized travel and overnight stays.

While these efforts generated strong interest and visitation, weather conditions continued to present challenges. Periods of extreme heat and rainfall impacted outdoor attractions and seasonal experiences, influencing visitor patterns throughout the year. Despite these factors, Ross County tourism remained resilient, with continued visitor spending supporting local businesses, attractions, and the broader community economy.

These funds provided a total operating budget of $573,075.41, supporting continued destination marketing efforts throughout the year.

Marketing Results

The Bureau expanded its marketing efforts across both traditional and digital platforms to reach audiences well beyond the region. Print advertising appeared in such publications as Ohio Magazine, Woman's Day, Good Housekeeping, and Compass, supported by integrated digital placements through these publications, as well as National Geographic. Additional digital efforts included targeted Google Ads and social media advertising, extending the Bureau's marketing reach to more than 450 miles from Ross County.

These combined efforts generated a substantial increase in requests for visitor information. More than 5,000 visitor packets were requested and distributed to interested individuals with a reach to all 50 states. The top five states outside of Ohio requesting information included Pennsylvania, Florida, New York, Virginia, and Illinois, with notable growth in interest from western markets, led by Texas, California, Colorado, Arizona, and Washington.

Top Three Demographic Categories for 2025

Families in Motion

This group primarily consists of married couples ages 25-45, many with two or more children. They live in quiet towns supported by employment in construction, manufacturing, and skilled trades. These households value outdoor recreation and family-oriented activities.

Power Elite

This market values sophisticated yet authentic experiences, with a strong appreciation for quality products and service. Many are empty nesters, with greater flexibility and curiosity, they dine out, enjoy evening events, and travel extensively both within the U.S. and internationally.

Autumn Years

This segment is made up primarily of older, retired couples - most over age 65. They prefer familiar, low-key activities and the occasional dinner out. They favor quiet, predictable leisure experiences. They engage in traditional media, like women's and housekeeping magazines.

Attractions

Attraction performance in 2025 reflected both growth and weather-related challenges. Hopeton Earthworks experienced the highest increase in visitation, followed by continued gains in Downtown Chillicothe, and the Majestic Theatre. Several outdoor attractions, however, saw slight declines or remained flat year over year, largely due to weather impacts including periods of extreme heat and heavy rainfall.

Visitor Center

Planning progressed for a new Visitor Center that will serve as a regional gateway for travelers exploring Chillicothe, Ross County, and southern Ohio, while supporting visitation to the World Heritage-inscribed earthworks. The center was designed to include interactive exhibits to engage visitors with attractions and experiences. Funding for this project was secured through state capital funds awarded to the Ross County Commissioners, and the Visitor Center is planned for North Mulberry Street in coordination with the City of Chillicothe. Its location aligns with improvements planned for Yoctangee Park. Upon completion, the center will become the new home of the Ross-Chillicothe Convention & Visitors Bureau, with an anticipated completion date by the end of 2026.

In the Mix in '26: Plans & Goals

Marketing

Marketing priorities for 2026 build on the expanded reach achieved in 25, which resulted in increased requests for visitor information from states farther outside Ohio and growth in website traffic from travelers seeking to learn more about Chillicothe and Ross County. While the destination is widely recognized for its charm, many visitors continue to experience Ross County as a day trip rather than an overnight stay. The 2026 marketing plan focuses on converting this growing interest into longer stays by positioning Ross County as a premier heritage and outdoor destination. Key strategies include partnering with lodging providers to develop “Stay & Explore” packages tied to major attractions and events, pitching destination stories to regional travel outlets such as Ohio Magazine, Midwest Living, and Only in Your State, and strengthening promotion of existing annual events with messaging that encourages weekend travel. Additional efforts will support shoulder-season visitation, alongside the launch of a new Bureau website in 2026 designed to better serve interested travelers and convert inspiration into trip planning.

Foward Looking Overview

Additional initiatives in 2026 will focus on capitalizing on key opportunities that support visitation growth and partner engagement. America 250 presents a significant opportunity to showcase the heritage of Chillicothe and Ross County and highlight the area’s role in the nation’s story. New lodging options will further support overnight visitation, with the opening of TownePlace Suites by Marriott in spring providing an additional property for travelers. Several conferences and events are being planned that are expected to generate additional room nights in the community. Alongside these efforts, the Bureau will continue to strengthen communication with partners through quarterly updates and shared opportunities to collectively reach and engage target audiences.

Looking Ahead, Together

Building Momentum for What’s Next

As Ross County continues to gain attention as a destination, the progress made this year reflects the power of collaboration, strategic investment, and a shared commitment to growth. From expanded marketing reach and increased visitor spending to planning efforts that support future visitation, 2025 laid important groundwork for what comes next. None of this progress is possible without the support from partners, stakeholders, and community leaders. Looking ahead through 2026, the Ross-Chillicothe Convention & Visitors Bureau remains focused on strengthening visitation, supporting overnight stays, and ensuring tourism continues to be a positive economic driver for the community.
